Of Human Wealth: New Money for a New World

By Bernard Lietaer and Stephen Belgin

Of Human Wealth is the much-anticipated book that draws from the acclaimed international best-seller The Future of Money (which has been translated into eighteen languages), the Mystery of Money (available until now only in German, Japanese, Korean, Russian and Chinese), together with important new material, insights and updated research.

This work provides a unique interdisciplinary perspective on the topic of money, its deep relationship to human consciousness and present world conditions. It offers a pragmatic, achievable means by which we can truly co-create a far better world for children, our future generations and ourselves. A companion website, which will be announced and launched later this year will include illustrations, articles, relevant research and interviews.

As the co-authors write: "We can end the threats to our environment and aid dramatically in its restoration; we can help provide meaningful work for all, with work that enhances and replenishes the world about us; we can effectively address fundamental urban and rural concerns and assist in the development of viable, sustainable communities; we can care for the sick and the elderly and provide all of our children with adequate shelter, healthcare, nutrition and decent educations. We can indeed create a better world where life and all living systems flourish. This is not an idealistic dream, but rather, a pragmatic attainment, and achievable within our very own lifetimes."

Pre-publication editions are available between now and publication date, which is to be announced shortly, with a view to obtain feedback from our readers and to ensure excellence.
